127 CHARING CROSS ROAD
LONDON

In the heart of the West End

Charing Cross Road runs north to south bisecting Soho and Covent Garden. At one end it meets Trafalgar Square and the other merges into Tottenham Court Road at the junction with Oxford Street, one of the busiest crossroads in London's West End.

127 Charing Cross Road sits on a valuable corner on the Soho side of the street, just across from Denmark Street, in an area of cultural and historic significance to London's music scene. The advent of Cross Rail has catalysed significant redevelopment in the neighbourhood over the past ten years with major projects springing up around Soho Square and Charing Cross Road.

In addition to Tottenham Court Road's new Crossrail extension, new buildings include the Soho Place Theatre, Ilona Rose House, One Soho Place, The Arcade Foodhall at Centrepoint and the extraordinary Outernet immersive entertainment district.

London's West End continues to be one of the most visited locations in the world and 127 Charing Cross Road is at the heart of it.
